Lily: I am going to Green Island for vacation this weekend.

Tina: Really? I heard that the sea and the beach there were so beautiful. You must take pictures and show them to me after you come back.

Lily: OK!

Tina: What do you plan to do there?

Lily: On the first day, I will spend two hours snorkeling in the sea and then go to a hot spring. Next day, I'll have a cup of coffee by the sea and watch the famous Sleeping Beauty Rock and Pekinese Dog Rock.

Tina: Great! It's wonderful to take a hot spring and watch the sunrise at the same time!

Lily: Not really. I'll go to the hot spring in the evening, not in the morning.

Tina: Why? You can't get up earlier?

Lily: You got it!

Tina: I see, but it doesn't matter. I think your trip will still be fun.

A Travelling Library

If you like to read while travelling and don't want to put heavy books into your bag, Melbourne, a city in Australia, must be a good choice. When you get around Melbourne by bus or tram, you may find that on the seats are not people but books. There is a piece of paper on each book saying "Take this book, read it, and then give it back for someone else to enjoy."

Those books are all a part of a reading movement, Books on the Rail, and this idea was from Ali Berg and Michelle Kalus. They wanted Australians to put down their smartphones and read, so they began to put books on the vehicles, like buses and trams. Soon, people, or "book ninjas," started to do the same. Publishers and writers also joined it. Now, there are 300 books for people to take home, read, and enjoy!

 tram 有軌電車    movement 活動    vehicle 車輛    publisher 出版商

- ( ) 33. What is the movement for?
 (A) Inviting foreigners to visit the city.
 (B) Hoping people to read more books.
 (C) Helping publishers to sell their new books.
 (D) Wanting people to put down their phones and enjoy the ride.
- ( ) 34. What can a book ninja most likely say about the movement?
 (A) "I have to pick up the book before I sit down. It makes me angry!"
 (B) "I like it, but if I can bring the book home and read it easily, it will be better."
 (C) "Wonderful! It's important to spend more time with the family than the iPhones."
 (D) "I've dreamed of it for a long time. There is always a surprise waiting for me on the bus."
- ( ) 35. Which is not true about Books on the Rail?
 (A) You can read the books for free.
 (B) You can also find books on trains.
 (C) You can join it by putting books on a bus.
 (D) You have to donate a book before you take one.

Holi, the Hindu festival starting thousands of years ago, happens at the beginning of spring and marks the harvest season. On this day, all the people in India join together to celebrate it by throwing colored powder into the air and also to their friends and family. Everyone is treated equally at Holi no matter what caste he is on. This seldom happens under India's caste system because people think those of a high caste are better than those of a low one.

Holi also marks the winning of good over evil. It's said that Holika, a bad woman, tried to kill her nephew, Prince Prahlada, in a fire, but she failed and died. Therefore, people also have Holika bonfires during the festival. Each of these fires has a special statue of Holika in it.

Today, people around the world enjoy this bright colorful festival and celebrate it not only with colored powder or bonfires but also with live music and dancing. If you are interested in it, why not go to a Holi event this year?

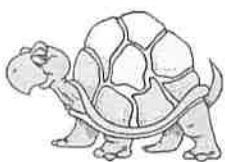

- ( ) 45. What would be a good name for this reading?
 (A) Special Holi Activities. (B) India's Caste System.
 (C) The Winning of Good. (D) A Wonderful Spring.
- ( ) 46. Who is the most likely to join a Holi event in India?
 (A) Ian, who enjoys listening to music at home.
 (B) Sandy, who wants to experience India's cultural activity.
 (C) Jacky, who plans to have a vacation in India this summer.
 (D) Kay, who loves telling stories about the winning of good over evil.
- ( ) 47. Which is not true?
 (A) Holika is the symbol of evil.
 (B) People in India are seldom treated equally.
 (C) The Hindu festival of Holi began about 100 years ago.
 (D) People throw colored powder at each other during Holi.
