Asha was unhappy because she was tired every day. She talked to her father, "Life is too difficult, so I want to give up!"

At first, her father smiled and said nothing. He just gave her an egg, some tea leaves, and a potato. Later, he gave her another three pots and said, "Oh dear, put the egg, the tea leaves, and the potato into three pots, fill every pot with water, place them on the fire." After ten minutes, the water was boiling, he said, "peel the egg, peel the potato, and take the tea leaves out from the water."

Asha was puzzled before her father said everything. Her father told her, "They were all in the boiling water. See, how are they different now?" "The egg was soft, but is hard now. The potato was hard, but is soft now. It was water, but it is tea now." The father then asked, "Now, are you an egg, a potato, or tea leaves?"

Taiwan's ultra-marathon runner Tommy Chen showed Taiwan's flag to the world after he finished the 330 km run. Chen finished the run in 106 hours and 45 minutes and was ranked 51. It is not brilliant, but at least he finished this difficult race. There were 867 runners at the starting line, but at the end of the race, there were 461.

Chen shared his experience on his Facebook page after he came back to Taiwan. In the beginning, his left knee was in pain after 43 hours in the race. After he passed 200 km, he had the idea of giving up the race because there was so much pain in the knee. But he took painkillers and kept running. After he passed 280 km, a heavy rain began to fall. When he got to the last mountain top, the rain suddenly became a heavy snow and it was super cold. He finally went through all the snow and arrived at the finish line.
