(44-46 為一題組)

When we go to the beach, sometimes we will see hermit crabs on the beach. And we all know hermit crabs have to change to bigger shells when they grow bigger. In fact, when they finally find a new shell, they have a special habit: They will tell other hermit crabs to change shells together!

How do they change shells together? When they start to get together, they will stand in line according to their sizes. After the first one (also the biggest one) takes off its shell, the second one (smaller than the biggest one) puts on the shell of the first one. Then the third one puts on the shell of the second one, and so on. It is interesting, isn't it?

Why do they change shells this way? In fact, it is not easy to find a new shell. By doing this, the chance of not finding a shell will be smaller. Hermit crabs try their best to live. To help them, please don't take away shells on the beach, and don't leave trash on the beach, either. Don't make them only have to live by taking our trash as their homes.

📖 hermit crab 寄居蟹 shell 殼 according to 根據

44. Which does “one” mean in the reading?

- (A) A shell. (B) Some trash.
(C) Home of the hermit crab. (D) A hermit crab.

45. Which may be the best title for the reading?

- (A) An Interesting Fact About Hermit (B) How Is Trash Bad to Hermit Crabs
(C) Some Good Ideas About Using Shells (D) The Life Story of a Hermit Crab

46. What can we NOT know from the reading?

- (A) Hermit crabs look for new shells on the beach.
(B) It is a good idea to give hermit crabs some man-made shells.
(C) The smallest hermit crabs will be at the end of the line.
(D) If hermit crabs can't find new shells, they may take trash as their houses.

Sausages in Space—Don't Always Believe What You See Online

Have you ever mistaken a sausage for a star? The question might sound funny, but in early August 2022, thousands of people on the Internet did exactly that. Who was behind all of this? French scientist, Etienne Klein.

Klein, who does his study in an energy company, has over 100,000 followers on Twitter. Like many other Internet users, Klein loved the pictures taken by the James Webb Space Telescope published in July 2022. The telescope is the most powerful of its kind, and it took beautiful pictures in deep space. After the telescope's pictures were published, Klein saw a chance to have some fun. Bring on the sausage!

Instead of posting real photos taken by the telescope, Klein uploaded a picture of a slice of sausage. In his post, he said that it was Proxima Centauri, the closest star to sun. Thousands upon thousands of people believed Klein, and they shared his post, though some people realized that he was joking. After seeing the picture, you will know why so many people were tricked.

Soon after thousands of people shared his post, Klein said it was a joke. This could also teach people to be more careful about what they believe online. Who said scientists can't have fun?

Have you ever thought about making a guitar on you own? This is a really easy thing to do. Follow the steps below, and you can make yourself an easy guitar. You only need a box, a thumbtack, several toothpicks, several rubber bands, and paper.

	Step 1 Cut a hole on the top of the box.
	Step 2 Take the thumbtack, and make a small hole by the big hole. Then, put a toothpick in the small hole and push it down. Make a hole on the other side, place another toothpick in the box, and put a rubber band around the two toothpicks, as you see in the picture.
	Step 3 Repeat Step 2 by making holes with the thumbtack and put in the toothpicks. Then put on rubber bands until your guitar looks like the picture on the left.
	Step 4 Paste the paper around the box and draw pictures if you like. Now, your guitar is done and you can also play the drums with it.
